

Re: Java Enabled

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-06/20681.html>

From: Tom (no-way_at_not-here.com)

Date: 06/20/04

Date: Sun, 20 Jun 2004 11:15:21 -0400

"Bruce Chambers" <bchambers@nospamcableone.net> wrote in message news:e47T$YtVEHA.716@TK2MSFTNGP11.phx.gbl...

> Greetings --

>

> As the result of a lawsuit by Sun Microsystems, and the ensuing > settlement, Microsoft was not allowed to provide its own Java Virtual > Machine to Windows XP users. You can get almost the same > functionality by downloading Sun's version of Java from > <http://java.sun.com/getjava/index.html>. If you want the wider website > compatibility of Microsoft's Java Virtual Machine, it is still > available from a lot of 3rd-party web sites, some of which are listed > here: <http://www.java-virtual-machine.net/download.html>.

>

Still doesn't work Bruce, but I'll explain again, in case you don't understand. The link you provide works fine; it is the link you provide that has a link that is supposed to provide the MSJVM; it doesn't work.

<http://www.mvision.mpsnet.com/java.htm>

This is the link within your link. You may want to use the one I offered before.