

Re: Disable LAN Card in a User Profile???

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-06/7672.html>

From: Phil (I.fix.probs_at_for.you)

Date: 06/07/04

Date: Mon, 7 Jun 2004 15:29:47 -0400

Nope, won't work. Best thing to do with a child on the internet is to get a program like Net Nanny and set it up to lock down the internet and monitor his activities as you like.

t.cruise wrote:

- > I have a 6 year old who likes to go to game sites, some of which
- > install spyware/malware etc. He will click on anything, including
- > adding Controls, which I might not want. I don't mind him having
- > access to programs or installing his game software. So, he does need
- > an Administrator account, but I'd like to keep him off the internet
- > though. If I create an Administrator account for him and in the
- > Device Manger of HIS user profile, disable the Network Adapter card
- > (I have a cable connection), will that only disable the Network
- > Adapter in his user profile, but still make it available in mine?