My xp computer is suddenly acting strange in the fact that when either myself or my wife go to log off each others accounts the computer gets to a point of logging one side off and then instead of going to the welcome screen to shut down ...it simply shows whichever desktop photo of whichever side you are logging off from and nothing else therefore there are now no buttons or any tabs to hit to log off...All you can do is a hard shutdown of the system and restart to get back on ...It does not matter whether one person is logged on or both with fast user switching enabled .. I know this is a long drawn out question but it is kind off baffling at best...

Running xp home,,Norton security and antivirus,,all windows updates including sp2 installed...Webroot's spy sweeper.. Intel 2.8 with hyperthreading ...1 gig of ram..intel 865perl motherboard....

Any help would be as always appreciated
