

Re: SP2 and Sec Center nags

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-10/5050.html>

From: PaulS (PaulS_at_discussions.microsoft.com)

Date: 10/04/04

Date: Mon, 4 Oct 2004 13:01:05 -0700

That's a solution I can live with. Thanks!

"R. McCarty" wrote:

> Disable both Security Center and Automatic Updates via Services.Msc.
>
> "PaulS" <PaulS@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message > news:011C761D-9613-4FF8-A741-E859174E6C30@microsoft.com...
> > I'm in charge of maintaining the machines in a SOHO with a handful of XP
> > Pro
> > boxes. I recently put SP2 on all three, but because I have autoupdate > > disabled (I prefer to test patches on my machine before deploying), the > > users are getting nag balloons from Security Center complaining that > > autoupdates are off. I've enabled "Turn off access to all Windows Update > > features" and "Remove links and access to Windows Update" in the Group > > Policy
> > settings, but no dice. All users have admin rights thanks to a requirement > > from an ancient finance package. Thoughts? This is driving me crazy.
>
>
>