

Re: Password protection on a folder

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-11/18923.html>

From: Googleman (kapekod_at_comcast.net)

Date: 11/28/04

Date: Sat, 27 Nov 2004 23:31:52 -0500

not sure if this is adding anything of value... but I have laptop (with sensitive info work related) running xp pro too.. and I have a required password right at the point of login.. and if I'm away from my desk.. or briefly away, I hit the windows key on my dell and the L key .. and that locks my machine..and only can be accessed when I input my password again.

if someone stole machine, the BEST they'd be able to do (I?? think??) is reformat my drive and start from scratch. I could be wrong.

I do believe as well you can click on a folder and select the sharing option.. and make that folder a private folder ???

not 100% on everything here, but hopefully something helps.

good luck

"Alex Martinez" <alex_martinez@comcast.net> wrote in message news:ew8VG5P1EHA.1408@TK2MSFTNGP10.phx.gbl...

> Hello,

> I am using Windows XP professional on my laptop and I am always worried > about my laptop gets stolen and I am wondering if its possible that I can > apply password protection on a windows folder? Any hints or suggestions > will be appreciated. Thank you.

>