

Re: corrupted task manager

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-11/3907.html>

---

From: Ross Durie (rdurie_at_caverock.net.nz)

Date: 11/06/04

Date: Sat, 6 Nov 2004 16:40:04 +1300

Yes there is a simpler fix given this is normal behaviour. Simply click on a border and it will restore to the old view.

--

Ross

"NCBill" <wrwnc@bellsouth.net> wrote in message
news:eIE7wEHA.3624@TK2MSFTNGP09.phx.gbl...

> Somehow the task manager application in XP has become corrupted so that > when I open task manager, I get a simple window with the list of > currently open programs, but I do NOT get the various tabs at the top > which allow me to view CPU activity, processes open, etc. There is also > no place on the task manager to minimize, maximize, or close the > application. The only way I can close the application is to use Alt F4.
>
> I assume that I can restore this by reloading windows XP, but I just > went through installing SP2 and wonder if reinstalling windows would > require reinstalling the service pack.
>
> Is there a simpler fix for this?