

Re: How to slipstream SP2 for CD with slipstreamed SP1

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2004-12/17652.html>

From: Jack Gillis (XXXXXXXXX_at_widomaker.com)

Date: 12/27/04

Date: Mon, 27 Dec 2004 12:13:52 -0500

"Harry Ohrn" <harry---@webtree.ca> wrote in message
news:OL%23bvCD7EHA.1408@TK2MSFTNGP10.phx.gbl...

> Try using Autostreamer - freeware -

> <http://www.autopatcher.com/autostreamer.html>

> Run the program and point to your XP CD then point to the location of > SP2 and let it build an ISO. Then burn that to disc using an app that > can properly burn ISO images and voila.

Very few people bring up Autostreamer when describing how to slipstream an SP but, Fortunately, someone did mention it when SP2 first came out.
I downloaded it, ran it and sat back and said, "This can't possibly work -- it is too easy." I think it is one of the slickest things available as freeware. It should get more recognition.

>

> --

>

> Harry Ohrn MS-MVP [Shell/User]

> www.webtree.ca/windowsxp

>

>

> "xfile" <cou-cou@remove.nospam.com> wrote in message

> news:OQVJ8166EHA.2592@TK2MSFTNGP09.phx.gbl...

>> Hi:

>>

>> I tried to slipstream my OEM Windows XP Pro SP1 and found out it is >> already slipstreamed, and therefore got an error message saying it >> cannot be slipstreamed again.

>>

>> Is there a workaround?

>>

>> Thanks in advance.

>>

>

microsoft.public.windowsxp.general: Re: How to slipstream SP2 for CD with slipstreamed SP1

>