

Re: XP Pro – making a rescue/recovery-cd

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2005-02/10898.html>

From: Yves Leclerc (yleclercNOSPAM_at_maysys.com)

Date: 02/07/05

Date: Mon, 7 Feb 2005 14:33:51 -0500

You can take a "disk image" of your system now with a utility like Norton Ghost. This "disk image" now will become your own Recovery media and can be "burnt" onto a CD/DVD, along with the DOS Ghost program.

"Inge" <ingen@tingmail.tele.dk> wrote in message
news:4207513b$0$29284$14726298@news.sunsite.dk...

> Hi

> I have an Acer Veriton with XP Pro preinstalled. And I have installed > servicepack 2 from a cd from Microsoft. The computer came without a > recovery-cd, it has only a "recovery-button" so I can push the button and > start all over!!

> So far my computer is workin just fine, no problems, (knock-on-wood), but > I > would like to know if I could make my "own" cd with XP Pro from files on > the > computer? And how to find the product-key or -id? I did not have to > activate

> my XP, it was done from the manufacturer. I've called Acer to ask for a > recovery-cd, but they do not supply them, so I have only the > "recovery-button" if it goes down. There is a hidden part on the harddisk > that I do not have access to, about 2 GB in size.

> I thought maybe I should buy a cd with XP Pro, just in case, but it's > quite > expensive so I haven't.

> Can you tell me what to do?

> Thanks in advance, I hope you understand my dilemma.

>

> Inge

>