

Re: hope someone can help me

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2005-02/7334.html>

From: Kevin (webman6_at_hotmail.com)

Date: 02/03/05

Date: Wed, 2 Feb 2005 20:41:26 -0800

Spelling. Grammar. Punctuation. Please use all three of these concepts when posting.

If you have actually used another PC, on another internet connection entirely, in a totally different geographical location, with completely different usernames and passwords, and this is still happening, the hacker is one of your friends. Possibly the one looking over your shoulder at this very moment as you read this reply. What you allege is being done is beyond the capability of all but a very tiny handful of professional hackers and internet security engineers. The Central Intelligence Agency or the National Security Agency may be capable of this. But, why would they be interested in you?

In short, I don't believe you.

"jason" <jason@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message news:8FD4A8EA-FCBC-43E9-8052-6749F2078D68@microsoft.com...

> hi all > im hoping someone out their can help me???

> well i dont know where to start ok first is ive have a hacker i dont know > how to get rid off him, what he has done is taking over email accounts of my > own and some off my freinds eaither hotmail or yahoo he has even change > passwords on other web sites witch i use quite frequently i know he has been > recording my msn messenger chats and be getting my emails because sometimes > the bounce back for his account being to full. at first i thought he was > useing a keylgger planted on my pc so i wiped my hard drive clean started all > over again but to no avail the email address is the same but password been > change ive been lucky that all he dose is change the password an not the > secret question. i just dont know what to do.

> ive recently change my ip address and change email accounts as well i still > cant give him the flick ive even went as far as going to another pc an useing microsoft.public.windowsxp.general: Re: hope someone can help me > that one but to no avail he is back i just cant get rid off him its happening

> to a few of my freinds aswell an my missis also to no one knows any off our > passwords and we all have change them frequently, ok about my pc i use norton > 2005, i run spybot search destroy, ada ware personel, norton firewall and a > program called norton ghost, iesp2,norton password manager i run regular > checks with all at least once every 3 days with only the normal stuff coming > up like tracking cookie etc no big bici. > ive tryed lots of other ways to like changeing different browser to sercured
> ones etc
> but iv run out of ideas i just want to go about my business knowing that > someone isnt taking away my privacy i do realise nothing can be sercured but > their must be away to stop this person.
>
> please help me anyone > yours truely out of ideas jason
>
>
>
> Expand AllCollapse All