Hi Joram,

Give Doug Knox's "Disable/Enable Registry Editing tools in Windows" a try:
http://www.dougknox.com/security/scripts\_desc/regtools.htm

Once you have enabled registry editing, if you receive the "Registry editing has been disabled by your administrator" after restarting, then your computer has possibly been infected with some type of malware that is disabling registry editing. Ensure that your antivirus program is updated and run a full scan. In addition, have a look at the information here:
