Try this: Click your Start button/All Programs/Accessories/System Tools/System Restore

When the System Restore utility opens, select the option: Restore my computer to an earlier time, then click the NEXT button. The next window will be divided into two panes. On the left is a calendar pane. Click on a bold date (Bold dates contain Restore Points) as close to, but PRIOR to the problem. After selecting the Restore Point for that date in the right pane, continue with the wizard until it has finished and your system reboots. taking you back to the system settings of the date that you chose. Hopefully the above will fix the problem. System Restore will effect your data files, just Windows XP system files and settings. If you have installed any software, drivers, or updates between the date of the Restore Point that you chose and today, you will have to reinstall those things.
