

Re: WinXP and packet writing

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2005-05/msg12817.html>

- From: "Frank Saunders, MS-MVP, IE/OE" <franksaunders@xxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Sun, 22 May 2005 21:10:09 -0500
-

Not only does WinXP not natively support UDF packet writing, it can't read a DVD at all without a third party program.

--

Frank Saunders, MS-MVP, IE/OE
Please respond in Newsgroup. Do not send email
<http://www.fjsmjs.com>
Protect your PC
<http://www.microsoft.com/security/protect/>

"losl(removethis)" <"losl(removethis)"@canada.com> wrote in message
news:429013D8.1080509@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

- > My OS is WinXP Pro SP2. No packet writing software such as
- > InCD/DirecCD/DLA, no UDF reader is installed in my PC.
- >
- > Today a friend of mine brought me a DVD+rw disk formatted with Nero's
- > InCD, all the files in this DVD+RW were written by packet writing (drag &
- > drop directly from the HD similar to floppy). Unexpectedly my WinXP
- > recognises the DVD+rw as InCD and can READ all the files in it. I could
- > copy these files to my HD by drag and drop (it is normal, right?) but not
- > the reverse.
- >
- > How can it be? Dose WinXP Pro SP2 support reading files in UDF (packet
- > writing)?
- >
- > Thank you for your information!!
- >
- >
- > SLo

-
- References:
 - ◆ WinXP and packet writing

Re: WinXP and packet writing

◇ From: losl(removethis)

- Prev by Date: Re: Missing dll, don't have XP CD—only Compaq restore
- Next by Date: Re: Professional to Home
- Previous by thread: Re: WinXP and packet writing
- Next by thread: svchost crash/ low C drive space
- Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread