

Re: Screen Print question

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2005-05/msg17663.html>

- From: "LVTravel" <none@xxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Tue, 31 May 2005 15:40:53 -0400
-

You might try to use this program which can create .jpg files using the printscreen key. The free version on this site I use frequently. You can set the default name so that it never changes or set it so that it increments numerically each time a file is created.

The Plus version also has email feature built into it.

See if it meets your needs.

<http://www.wisdom-soft.com/products/screenhunter.htm>

"Mary Patricia" <rodgers.patricia@> wrote in message
news:%23OznksfZFHA.2664@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

> Hi All,

>

> I'm wondering if there is a way to change the default file format for > screen

> prints captured using Alt+PrintScreen, from .bmp to a lower resolution > one.

> I'm hoping to do this because my end users send a TON of screenshots to > various help desk/application development support staff and if I can > reduce > some of the file sizes, it'll help with my mail storage. Anything > involving > user training such as an additional software package is not really an > option

> for me. Thanks!

>

> Patti

>

>

>

- References:

- ◆ Screen Print question

- ◇ From: Mary Patricia

- Prev by Date: Re: ok, let's clear this up MS – is Product Activation really restricted?

- Next by Date: IE Toolbar

- Previous by thread: Re: Screen Print question

- Next by thread: backup query

- Index(es):

- ◆ Date

- ◆ Thread