Hello Dave,

In my opinion, this issue does not seem to be related to Windows XP. It should be caused by the hardware. You may change a video card as a test.

| My computer has been turned-off as recently as a week ago. So, it's not | like I haven't had it off in a long time. But I'll take your advice and
| clean-out the cpu and try to re-seat everything...

| Is there any chance that my Windows XP could be causing any of these | problems? Most of the weird display problems show-up on my desktop.
| Although, in any program, including Windows Explorer or Outlook Express
| screen will occasionally go black; then I just move the mouse or enter a
| key and it goes back on. Weird, huh??? Should I try to re-install XP?
| Or is this not likely the cause? Thanks again.
