

Re: Where is IIS?

---

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2005-07/msg15420.html>

---

- From: "Ken Blake" <kblake@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Fri, 29 Jul 2005 11:13:54 -0700
-

In news:748AA263-E25C-4E57-B4F2-D9702A9A0DC5@xxxxxxxxxxxxxx,
Kate <Kate@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> typed:

- > I'm trying to access IIS on my XP and there is no option for
- > it on
- > the Windows Components page, I assumed IIS came with XP, is
- > there
- > another way to access it or can I send off for software?

Assuming that you have XP Home, that's why. IIS comes with XP Professional, but not XP Home.

If you have XP Home, your only choices are to upgrade to XP Professional or instead use a third-party product like Apache Server.

—

Ken Blake – Microsoft MVP Windows: Shell/User
Please reply to the newsgroup

---

• References:

- ◆ Where is IIS?
  - ◇ From: Kate
- Prev by Date: Re: Validation
- Next by Date: RE: bad cluster problems
- Previous by thread: RE: Where is IIS?
- Next by thread: How to remote access my home computer?
- Index(es):
  - ◆ Date
  - ◆ Thread