Why would I say something like that? Because the people who provide help at the forums I listed don't steal other people's work and call it their own. They don't sneak around like a thief in the night and hide their true identities.

If you want to pass yourself off as some sort of security expert in that newsgroup, go right ahead. Hopefully, someone who's an active participant there will get wise to your act and warn anyone who you try to help that they're dealing with a thief. Meanwhile, anytime I spot you in one of the MS newsgroups, I'll alert the OP to legitimate sources of assistance. You aren't what I'd call a "trustworthy" source.

You may not be posting as pbutts1 anymore but your act hasn't changed.
