

Re: Passwords

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2006-02/msg00791.html>

- From: "Kelly" <kelly@xxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 2 Feb 2006 13:27:51 -0600
-

Another option would be to use the Content Advisor:

The Content Advisor provides parents enhanced control over what content their children can view on the Internet.

<http://www.microsoft.com/windows/ie/evaluation/features/indepth/contentadv.asp>

Configuring Content Advisor Settings

<http://www.microsoft.com/windows/ie/using/howto/contentadv/config.asp>

IE/Tools/Internet Options/Content/Content Advisor. From there make the appropriate settings in content advisor for language, nudity, sex, violence, non rated sites, authorized sites and supervisory password.

If you decide to use the Content Advisor and are using different profiles, I have a workaround for which accounts are 'limited' in viewing and which are not. E-mail me for details.

Or:

IE-SPYAD: Restricted Sites List for Internet Explorer

<http://www.staff.uiuc.edu/~ehowes/resource.htm#IESPYAD>

Net Nanny, the world's leading parental control software, provides responsible adults with the broadest set of Internet safety tools available today. <http://www.netnanny.com/index.html>

With Kids Passport, you can choose whether a participating Kids Passport Web site can collect, use, or disclose your child's personal information.

<http://kids.passport.net/?lc=1033>

To learn more about the Kids Passport service, please read the .NET Passport Kids Privacy Statement.

<http://www.passport.net/consumer/kidsprivacypolicy.asp?lc=1033>

--

All the Best,

Re: Passwords

Re: Passwords

Kelly (MS-MVP/DTS&XP)

Taskbar Repair Tool

<http://www.kellys-korner-xp.com/taskbarplus!.htm>

"Frank" <bbunny@xxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:esef2zCKGHA.584@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

Daughters are driving me nuts wrote:

I am having trouble with my daughters getting on the internet without our permission and I want to require some kind of block where they can't go on the internet without my permission and requiring me to put in a password. I have Windows XP. I would love to cancel our internet, but they still need it for school. Please help!

Just unplug the modem somewhere. You have a choice of three cords. WAN, LAN or the Power.

No Passwords??????????