

Problems with removable drives

---

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2006-04/msg08409.html>

---

- From: "Mahy" <jkotuc@xxxxxxxx>
  - Date: 22 Apr 2006 23:24:22 -0700
-

Hi there people,

whenever I plug a USB key into my winXP machine, it takes some drive letter. (So far, it's okay) But when I unplug it (the safe way, of course), the drive letter remains occupied and is visible e.g. via Total Commander. The drive itself is naturally not accesible, just like an empty CD/DVD drive. Moreover, it is not visible in Explorer, but it clearly remains in the system. The next time I plug my USB drive, it takes a different letter, and so on and so forth, until I reboot the machine and the vicious circle starts over again. I mean, it's a real bummer, please help me if you know what to do. Any help will be very much appreciated. TIA

Mahy

.