

Re: saving disk partition

---

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2006-06/msg06333.html>

---

- From: "DL" <dl@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Mon, 19 Jun 2006 14:13:41 +0100
-

Ghost or True Image – I prefer True Image others may differ.
Their help pages show 'how to'

If you are transferring all, inc o/s, to a new PC you will likely have to do a repair installation of winxp, including installing your mobo chipset and other drivers that are specific to the new sys

<nmdc69@xxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
news:1150721955.678468.35060@xx

Hi folks,
I want to save an image of the disk partition containing an XP installation (with a lot of software installed). I'd like to be able to install this image to another computer so I won't have to reinstall all the software.

Is this possible? What software should I use to create the image? Once the image is created, and stored on a hard disk, how do I install it?

Is there a way to leave out a folder (eg.: My Documents) so that the image will be smaller?

thanks in advance...