

Re: Black Tuesday Update Mess

---

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2006-07/msg05651.html>

---

- From: Pennywise@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx
  - Date: Mon, 17 Jul 2006 15:35:45 -0700
-

"antioch" <r.antiochdunkthis@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

|>Recently, in these groups, somebody said something like ' the problems
|>caused by updates were not as great as the problems caused by not
|>downloading updates' ?

Your running OE and I imagine IE which require the most patching, then you complain....

I updated with SP2 and have turn'd off my updates I don't get them I don't care for the sunrises involved..

The only update I've installed was for the WMF problem and that was third party.

I don't hat the WGA problems I'm reading here, and my machine is clean – not saying I don't have a rootkit, but I depend upon my modem lights to let me know of odd behavior.

I don't update and I don't have problems, plain and simple.
I use Opera browser and Agent newsreader, I'm behind an ADSL modem so ZoneAlarm is mostly installed to tell me what want's out. Nod32 is my virus protector that I never notice, only time I've seen it in action is when I was testing it <http://vx.netlux.org/>

—
<http://www.albinoblacksheep.com/flash/bunny.php>