You have me smiling, Kerry. That is my reaction... however, clients become quite attached to their software. This one even makes freshly baked bread.

I have similar clients. I have told them what the options are. If they base their business on something that is EOL then sooner or later they will be OoL (out of luck). So far I've been able to find compatible hardware for them but it is getting hard to find new motherboards that will work with Windows 98.
