This would indicate that your Home Edition CD is faulty. Causes of file copy errors during setup include, bad RAM, a bad hard drive, a bad cd drive, and bad installation media, since Pro installs fine I would guess your Home Edition cd is scratched or otherwise defective.

I was having trouble setting up Windows Home Edition as it kept hanging up at 'Setup cannot copy driver.cab' I carried on without it but it would set up.

I tried Windows Pro, and that has worked fine. It did stall at Cannot copy Driver.cab, but on retry went through fine.

However I don't really want XP Pro, as I have given up with it in the past do to not being able to get my home network working with its overly complicated settings for my use.

Now I'm up and running with Pro can I edit the HE files (e.g. copy Driver.cab). I have tried this unsuccessfully so far. Also which of the two sets of the systems files are which? How can I tell the difference?
