we have windows2003 Enterprise server Domain controller having 50 domain users from past few day from some WindowsXP clients domain users are not able to login but still domain administrator is able to login from those machines , can any one help me regarding this..

thanks in advance ,

It would appear that the users' domain accounts have been either disabled or deleted (hard to say since you declined to provide any useful information, such as error messages). Contact your IT department or network administrator for more specific assistance, as they'll know the specifics of your network and workstation configurations.
