re the crouchie installation, it was recommended by a responder to my original question by newbie coder. Well I have had enough of this problem and will just put up with it. I thank you for all your assistance Gary and your time taken to respond to this problem.

I'm a bit lost, since I have never addressed you primary issue, only that of MSN browser vs. IE and the .Net Framework. I know nothing about "crouchie".

To remove those lists in IE, you use Taskbar and Start menu (in Control Panel), click on Start Menu tab, click on either Clear or Clear List button (depending on the view you use.)

Gary

I was able to download and install .net framework 1.1 without problem.

I

tried the crouchie file but it did not remove any addresses from my MSN

Explorer. There were not any scroll down addresses when clicking on the address bar while using internet explorer so there was nothing to

MSN

delete using crouchie.. In Fact with internet explorer I entered google in the address bar and and clicked on the green web search bar and went to the

MSN

site

and then returned to the internet explorer home page and again in the address bar entered google. There was no drop down list that came up.I had expected a scroll down list showing that I had just gone to google but

MSN

there was nothing. If I had done this on MSN explorer (the butterfly) it would

have been added to the ever present scroll down list of addresses.

It does

appear

that I am stuck with these addresses on MSN

explorer.Another item that

I

noted on the addresses that scroll down in MSN explorer is that if I start

typing in an address which say starts with the letter "B", immediately

scroll down lists all sites that I have been to that starts with

Re: Removing search addresses

letter
"B". This occurs with any address that starts with a first letter i.e.
"F"
or
"K" etc the scroll down immediately lists all addresses that start with
first letter of the address that I am going to search for.

You won't likely find version 1.1.4322. Just version 1.1 (which is the same,
they just rounded it off.) And the easiest way to get the Frameworks
is
from Windows Update, Custom option.

Hi Gary
Thanks for your response. I guess that you are correct.
Seldom do I
use
internet explorer however when I went to it ,it was as you say. In
top
right corner is the "web search" box. Below on the same page as I
have

Re: Removing search addresses

MSN explorer is the address bar where you enter the website you want
to
go
to
and to the right you click on the green search box. I entered google
in
MSN address bar to see
what happened without clicking on search.
There
was
no
scroll down of previous address that I had , however they still come
up
when I go back to the butterfly and bring up the MSN page and enter an
address
in
the address bar.

Re the .net framework I will do as you suggest and find version
1.1.4322
and
try to get it installed.

What does

will take

though it
might
say
something
different in the title bar.

If
