

Re: Pop-Ups From New Owner

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2007-09/msg05375.html>

- From: "Andrew Murray" <adKillSpammersmurray@xxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 26 Sep 2007 21:46:44 +0800
-

A good alternative Anti-spam tool is Mailwasher. (www.mailwasher.net). It has a free and pay for ($39.95 US) version, a one off payment and free updates).

It's worth trying it, and cost is very reasonable for the features, and no "nag screens" asking you pay more for upgrades.

Alternatively: if you use Outlook periodically you will receive updated anti-spam signature files through Windows Updates. Other mail programs might have built in antispam features.

Another one I have tried recently is the antispam utility at www.pctools.com. They have free and paid versions.

Hope that offers some ideas.

"wassup.doc" <wassupdoc@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message news:B61D2FE6-51F3-4EE2-BB3D-425ECC4DDD83@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx

Years back I purchased an Anti-Spam ware program QURB. I found that it worked very well. No annual fees, yet there were upgrades when new spam was detected.

QURB writers sold out to a new company who now have pop-ups continually invading my computer saying I will not longer be protected and not allowed to have upgrades unless I buy the product again! A bit unfair I think. I am happy with the old program without upgrades. Is there a way to stop those pop-ups"

Many thanks, Wassup.

Re: Pop-Ups From New Owner