The idea was I do not want their updates if I had to pay for them. Doubtless the new owner would then start charging every year. I will follow Gordon's advice and get a new Anti Spam programme. Thanks for your help, I voted for you Wassup.

You're certainly welcome. Hard to believe, but there is zero spam here due to fully protected mail accounts (like the one I'm using right now) and local mail servers enriched with my own scripts concerning mail accounts with standard protection (filters) only. However, I was testing other solutions as well and the only one that I can really recommend for the standard user is this piece of software, best in combination with a local SMTP server: "WinAntiSpam" (Trialware): <http://www.winantispam.de/eindex.html>
