If you aren't redirecting the "My Music" folder to the external drive then it's more an Apple/iTunes issue.

How do I keep itunes from forgetting the location of audio files.
ok this is how I have itunes setup I add a folder from an external hard drive and it works the first time I do it but when I turn my computer back on again and the external hard drive and then when I open itunes and try to play one of the files it says that it can not be located do I need to export my library to the external hard drive and save the library.xml file in the itunes folder in order for it to remember the location or something? any ideas?
