

Re: Can't change email address

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2007-11/msg05399.html>

- From: "VanguardLH" <VanguardLH@xxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Wed, 28 Nov 2007 16:15:43 -0600
-

"WaIly" wrote in message news:mc4pk35gvvhqu0a3v3la2c4bv1a7dqi2is@xxxxxxxxxxx

On Tue, 27 Nov 2007 13:46:28 -0600, "VanguardLH" <VanguardLH@xxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Oh, and now you're asking about logging into a forum rather than how to actually log into an e-mail account? What forum are you talking about? This "forum". This is a newsgroup in Usenet despite Microsoft providing a webnews-for-dummies gateway to it.

Pricks like you are irritating.

Perhaps that's your intention due to being picked last for dodgeball in the third grade.

All of us aren't born with internet savvy as you apparently were.

Based on the OP's original post, responses would have addressed how to create or modify the e-mail account defined within whatever unnamed e-mail client the OP uses. Based on the OP's second post, he wasn't asking at all how to configure an e-mail client to work with his account. Also, it is unclear if the OP is having problems using his new e-mail address to login to the webnews-for-dummies gateway or if he wants to change the e-mail address on all his prior posts (which ain't gonna happen).

You were able to divine perfectly from the OP's first post that he was asking about how to login to some "forum"? If so, get a job at Psychic Friends Hotline because they really need you.

.