

Re: Double Click Options

---

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.general/2008-04/msg07274.html>

---

- From: Dave <DaveP@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: Mon, 28 Apr 2008 13:02:01 -0700
-

yes I agree, but unfortunately you don't get that option on a 'Save As' Window in WORD.

—

Dave P

"Three Lefts" wrote:

On Mon, 28 Apr 2008 09:29:07 -0700, Dave
<DaveP@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Yes, that's exactly what I mean. It shows itself up more when new users are trying to save a file in a folder using WORD or similar. If they are too slow clicking on the folder they want, it goes into this 'rename' state, and then they accidentally drag and the folder gets moved to somewhere else. Other users in the class see the folder for one minute but then it suddenly disappears because someone as accidentally moved it to become a sub-folder somewhere else.

I agree slowing down the Double click feature may help, but as I said, I am not always given access to Control Panel in a public library.

One thing that you CAN do is teach them to do the work from the left panel, where the folder name cannot be edited using a second (slow) click. Not a complete solution, but it may help.