I've tried out the Microsoft wireless desktop elite for bluetooth and Logitech dinovo bluetooth keyboard.

Overall, the Microsoft one is excellent and easy to install, the problem that I find is that it only works under XP and thats it! Doesn't work in the bios or dos etc. So its handy to have a cheap backup keyboard if you like to dabble! Funky blue and the batteries last about a month, thats with a fair bit of use.

The logitech one supports everything runs in and out of XP. Has a better build, feels like a laptop keyboard, nice and soft to touch. The only problem was the drivers, it didn't like any previous Logitech cordless drivers. Couldn't get them uninstalled and didnt detect the new keyboard at all. Solution was to reinstall XP from scratch. But other than that very good! £140 approx. so a bit expensive but well worth it though. Batteries last a bit longer with normal use. Very slim keyboard and mouse is very similar to other models.
