You must know what sound card you have. Look on your receipt/invoice for the computer – ask the people you bought the system from, open it up and look, etc.

There are applications out there that can identify what hardware you have, but I think they all depend on a properly installed system – as I think they pull the information from the registry. Perhaps they do not – so I will recommend you try two different ones:

Once you know what you have, what next? Go get the latest driver for your hardware/OS from the manufacturer's web page. For example, let's say you have an NVidia chipset video card or ATI video card, perhaps a Creative Labs sound card or C-Media chipset sound card...

Good luck!
