hi thanks for replying.i dont have a router.and am running windows xp home edition.i have scanned everything and found loads of rubbish,also had fun with the msblast worm which surprised me the system came with an antivirus installed which never detected anything.and today i uninstalled it and installed the free avg which immediately detected something,then the system will shut down in 60 seconds message appeared,thats when i knew.so i typed the shutdown a: command to stop it and scanned over and over and for ages it was fine.it doesnt seem to be freezing as much but it has froze a couple of times since.

i must agree the idea i have is a fault with the fan or something.

how can i find out if it with the temp of the laptop.?is there any software to check hardware status
