Hello All,

Thank goodness for this place..I enjoy it SO much ! I?m trying to find an answer for a friend of mine that recently upgraded his computer from windows 98 se to windows xp prof. . One problem I can?t seem to solve for him is that I can?t get his system to go into standby mode. I receive this error:

On a computer that has an ATI Rage Pro accelerated graphics port (AGP) 2X video adapter installed, when you attempt to put the computer into Standby mode, you may receive the following error message:

The device driver for the "ATI Technologies, Inc. 3D RAGE PRO AGP 2X" device is preventing the machine from entering standby. Please close all applications and try again. If the problem persists, you may need to update this driver. This behavior occurs because Windows XP does not provide power management support for this video adapter.

I?ve already updated his driver to this one: Windows XP Display Driver version 5.10.2600.6010

And I still receive the same message..I?m really wondering if it?s something else causing it. Does anyone have any suggestions ? Thanks SO much !!
