DPF stands for Downloaded Program Files they are stored in a folder with the same name on your hard drive. In that folder contains programs you downloaded and installed from the Internet. Examples of programs include Plug-ins (i.e. flash), ActiveX Controls and more. They are not needed. If you delete them they will be re-download as needed when you visit those sites again. Have you tried changing permissions on that reg key by right clicking the folder or using regedt32 instead of regedit?
