If your computer is a member of a domain then access to Run may have been disabled by your System Administrator through a Group Policy.

If this is a standalone computer, check the Local Security Policy (Start -> Run -> secpol.msc) for this setting:

User Configuration\Administrative Templates\Start Menu and Taskbar\Remove Run from Start Menu

If it's set to Enabled, change it to "Not Configured".

You should also check this registry key:

Go to Start -> Run and enter regedit.exe in the Open box. Click OK.

Navigate to this location:

HKCU\Software\Microsoft\Windows\CurrentVersion\Policies\Explorer

Look for a value in the right hand pane named NoRun with a Value data of 1. Either delete the value or change it to 0.

Good luck
