An online email system I use is accessed by the Windows Internet Explorer "User Authentication" screen. It displays a list of old email login names from hotmail, msn, and various old pop3 accounts. I want to get rid of this list.

Can someone tell me where is windows xp storing these login names? I cant find them in the registry or in Outlook. The login window can be disabled if I go to Tools/Options/Security/Custom Level/ User Authentication/Logon and selecting something other than "Prompt for user name and password" ... but then I cant login!
