So basically, what you are saying is I need Partition Magic? I can actually clear the whole harddrive if there is a way to start over and just set up one Drive.

Yes, Partition Magic can do what you want while preserving what you have but there are others, some free or nearly so, but buyer beware. Actually Partition Magic can perform this operation while booted into Windows but it can also do what you don't want if you happen to make a mistake, misunderstand its operation or don't have a grasp of how your comp is capable of booting. That is why I advised booting from its CD or even better the rescue floppies it offers to make when you install it to perform this sort of thing.

If you spend a little you don't need to start from scratch but that is always an alternative.
