Its your anti virus program which is what windows is telling you about , You either need to renew your anti virus subscription definitions or just update your definitions

Hi!

I have a notification bar that say that virus protection is 'Out of date'. It's Windows security center in Xp windows professional. I'm not so well into security options which concerns to my laptop, i'm sort of lame.

I think that the cause of this notification is because i didn't installed windows genuine advantage notification system 3 months ago, i thought it's very unnecessary and snoopy issue or would be a snoopy tissue on my computer, i personally find it strange.

When i found out about this out of date virus protection i went onto microsoft update page where were some else uninstalled optional programs such as; IE 7.0 (6.0. i find better becuse of habit), update for micr. core 6.0. service pack-xmk services, windows media 11 (i'm installing it now), microsoft .net frmaework x86, root certificates up, remote desktop conn. for xp, microsoft base card cryptografic x86, update for wmdrm-enabled media players ----> what do you suggest to update from this files, there are descriptions but that don't justify their installation.

Thanks,
With Respect,
