Ramesh,

Sorry that I didn't quite understand. Which screen and which different client?

Shams,

In there, the E-mail is set to Microsoft Office Outlook.

Select a different client in that screen, and click OK. Repeat the steps and this time, set Outlook as the default client. That ought to fix the problem.

If not, post the registry export per my previous post.

Hello MS Ramesh

In there, the E-mail is set to Microsoft Office Outlook. Another choince is Windows Live Mail. Apparently, the current setting is correct. Because I'm using Outlook 2007.

Right-click on the Taskbar, and choose Properties.
Select the "Start Menu" tab
Click "Start menu", and click "Customize"
In the General tab, under section "E-mail:", choose your mail client
Click OK, OK to close the dialog.
