For two years, I have been at peace with my Folder views. About two months ago, something happened and now I am at war. I prefer List view during File operations so I can see more content before having to scroll. Some unknown event has not only changed my default to Thumbnail view but has also foiled my efforts to change it back. Folder Options | View | "Apply to All Folders" does not live up to its name. Every time I save files from a download, for instance, or choose a location for an export, I must pull down the View Menu and choose List, and I grow tired of that.

I'm happy to make a Registry tweak if that would be required. Any ideas on what might be going on...?
