

Re: Log In Issue

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.messenger/2004-02/1400.html>

From: Joel Estes (joel_at_nowhere.com)

Date: 02/29/04

Date: Sun, 29 Feb 2004 11:34:56 -0600

Probably because you have not set the WINDOWS MESSENGER to not log on at boot. Activate Windows Messenger and go to Tools/Options/Preferences and click the right items so that it does not run on start up of the computer.

Joel

"Bob Bell" <gailbobbell@comcast.net> wrote in message news:1vWdnaM17ZWWgd_d4p2dnA@comcast.com...

> *For some strange reason I keep getting a message first from MSN 6.1 at > start-up that I am logging in with another service? Then I have to sign into > my hotmail account which is set to automatic log in when Windows XP home > addition starts. Then after I get Hotmail account to log in I get the same > issue except passport says that I have logged into a different account? I am > very confused just why MSN will simply log in sometimes and not at other > times, and passport seems to follow this log-in error? I have a old active > hotmail account, a newly installed MSN log in automatic setting and a net > passport account assigned also in the users account. I also have a brother > computer that does the same thing with this log in to MSN and the statement > from pass port that we are then logging into a different account . Can > anyone tell me just how to get these Windows XP machine to log in properly?
> Thanks
>
>*