Hi Wojo,
Thanks to everyone for the help and compliments!
I use Cutesite Builder for the website because its very easy to use and with a lil imagination it can look pretty decent. And I used Windows Movie maker of course to make the video. I then just added the file to my file directory on tripod which is my host and then added it to my site as streaming video, which is very easy to do when you are using Cutesite builder. Thanks again for everything and if ever in the S.E area of Michigan please stop in and introduce yourselves. You'll find all the information on when and where to find me on the actual bio portion of my site.
Sincerely,

I agree with Papajohn the site looks great and the video plays very nicely now.
Out of curiosity what software did you use to create the website and to put the video up?

PapaJohn,
Thanks for all of your help!
I adjusted the html and set it for 600 x 400, and it makes a great deal of difference. Lots easier to see! Dont know why i had it set for the 400 x 400?...lol. Anyways, I also set it for autostart and removed the controls.
Looks pretty good now. Let me know what ya think. And if you get the time, check out the rest of my online biography, of which the Helicon reunion is a part of.
Thanks again!

the
browser squeeze it down into a 400 pixel embedded player on your web

settings of the page.

I read that as having higher quality flow across the internet but then
squeezing it to lower quality in the browser. For the same data flow
you could have the browser view it at the full 640x480 at no more data
cost... or if you prefer the 400
pixel size, save the movie at that size instead
of
at 640x480... you could lower the bitrate
proportionally and get the same quality.... resolving some of the viewing issues.... see the making a custom

Thanks to everyone

PapaJohn,
you stated that I should make a

I'm not quite sure
what you
mean.
Could you
please
elaborate
and instruct on how to do
this.
Thank you
very much

you're constraining

your

it
