I was going to run the Network Setup Wizard on a computer running 98 using the Windows XP CD and after I restarted the computer I then decided not to run the Network Wizard as it automatically appeared on my screen. Instead, I closed the Wizard. Now, everytime I reboot my Windows 98 computer I have an icon in the taskbar that says "Internet Gateway Not Configured" and cannot simply make this icon go way.

HELP!@!!!!!! This is driving me nuts...???
