

Re: Silly Question?

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.network_web/2004-10/1761.html

From: Brian E. Clark (reply_at_newsgroup.only.please)

Date: 10/11/04

Date: Mon, 11 Oct 2004 21:53:50 GMT

Grandad <micksoutham@msn.com> wrote:

> Can anyone explain what an "Uplink" port is for on a networking switch?

An uplink port is used for connecting another switch, hub, and so forth to the switch without using a crossover cable. The port itself is cross-wired, meaning Transmit and Receive are swapped.

--

Brian E. Clark