

Re: Can't access network from wireless laptop

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.network_web/2004-12/2401.html

From: Eddie Sanderford (EddieSanderford_at_discussions.microsoft.com)

Date: 12/22/04

Date: Wed, 22 Dec 2004 15:53:01 -0800

BTW, I can ping the the desktop PCs from the laptop but cannot see them in windows explorer or network places,

"Eddie Sanderford" wrote:

> I had no firewall enabled and still was not able to see other network > components.any other suggestions?
>
> "Malke" wrote:
>
> > Eddie Sanderford wrote:
> >
> > > I am running a home office network with two desktop PCs hard wired to > > > a > > > D-Link 614 wireless router and a laptop running XP Home using a > > > wireless card. Since updating to SP-2 I can't access any LAN resources > > > from the laptop, although I do have a good wireless network connection > > > to the router and to the internet througe my broadband provider.
> > >
> > > Before enabling 128 bit encryption and updating to SP2, I had no > > > problem accessing network resources.
> > >
> > > File and print sharing is enabled on all units and I can access > > > resources on > > > each of the desktops from each other desktop
> >
> > Service Pack 2 automatically enables the Windows Firewall. If you are > > not using a third-party firewall, go to the Windows Firewall applet in > > Control Panel and enable File & Printer Sharing in the Firewall's > > Exceptions tab. If you are using a third-party firewall that previously > > had your lan as Trusted, then disable the Windows Firewall.
> >
> > Malke
> > --
> > *MS MVP - Windows Shell/User
> > Elephant Boy Computers
> > www.elephantboycomputers.com*

microsoft.public.windowsxp.network_web: Re: Can't access network from wireless laptop

> > "Don't Panic!"

> >