

Re: Dial up connection interruption

---

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.network\_web/2005-11/msg00391.html

---

- From: "Kyle Wylie" <kyle.wylie@xxxxxxxxxx>
  - Date: 12 Nov 2005 14:10:54 -0800
-

Thanks for all the suggestions. It's only a new computer and I scan regularly for malware/ spyware/ viruses etc so I'm happy that isn't the reason. The intervals between disconnections appear pretty constant so I'm going with a possible ISP setting or even the call waiting suggestion.

I'm gonna give the phone company a shout (same company runs phone & ISP). It's looking as though internet connections take a back seat from voice lines. "Once we can talk on the phone isn't it enough??", sure the internet is just an added bonus" seems to be the common attitude!

.

---

- Follow-Ups:
  - ◆ Re: Dial up connection interruption
    - ◇ From: Chuck
- References:
  - ◆ Dial up connection interruption
    - ◇ From: Kyle Wylie
  - ◆ Re: Dial up connection interruption
    - ◇ From: JHG
- Prev by Date: Re: Access denied to XP Home computer
- Next by Date: Re: Enabling and disabling for limited a/c
- Previous by thread: Re: Dial up connection interruption
- Next by thread: Re: Dial up connection interruption
- Index(es):
  - ◆ Date
  - ◆ Thread