

Netgear to Linsky Router is Possible?

Source:

http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.network_web/2007-12/msg00043.html

- From: "MapleE." <someone|@comcast.net>
 - Date: Mon, 3 Dec 2007 00:32:23 -0500
-

Hi:

Currently, I have the following Router, 'NetGear Wireless-G Router' that was rented by my ISP, Comcast.

<http://www.netgear.com/Products/RoutersandGateways/GWirelessRouters/WGR614.aspx>

However, I want to replace it to the following router, 'Linsky Wireless-G Router with Speed Booster.' Because, one of computer has Vista and I want to get more speed.

There are three more PCs and Laptop, all of which has XP-Home Edition.

http://www.linksys.com/servlet/Satellite?c=L_Product_C2&childpagename=US%2FLayout&cid=1148435315453&pa

My question is;

Is it possible for me to switch from Netgear to Linsky on my own?

The reason I'm asking is that Netgear was installed upon subscribing my ISP and professionally installed by ISP-technician. Then, I never done it, although I did replace wireless adapter to Linsky Speed-booster on the back of PC with Vista.

If possible, what step and precaution should I take before proceeding ?

Thanks for your help in advance.