

Re: Taskbar Problem

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.newusers/2004-03/1434.html>

---

From: Rick \ (rick_at_mvps.org)

Date: 03/10/04

Date: Wed, 10 Mar 2004 07:33:08 -0500

Hi,

Download her file, right-click it and select edit. It should open in notepad, and you can see the registry files that are affected (deleted) after the explorer shell has been halted. When restarted, the keys are rebuilt. There are a number of steps that need to take place, and what Kelly (with a little help if you read the acknowledgement lines) is simplify this process and automate it.

--

Best of Luck,

Rick Rogers aka "Nutcass" MS-MVP - Win9x

Windows isn't rocket science! That's my other hobby!

<http://mvp.support.microsoft.com/>

Associate Expert - WinXP - Expert Zone

www.microsoft.com/windowsxp/expertzone

Win98 Help - www.rickrogers.org

"Andy" <anonymous@discussions.microsoft.com> wrote in message

news:C5FAD9AC-33D0-4EFA-972A-43FDA828E6AB@microsoft.com...

> I noticed that many people have the same problem.

>

> Problem: Can't access the program when minimized.

>

> Possible Solution Given:

> -> Use the registry key downloaded at Kelly webpage.

>

> I would like to know if there is a way to fix this problem without using any outside file/program.

>

> No, I do not have Autohide taskbar option selected. No, I do not have Group Similar Taskbar selected.

>

> I look forward to hear from Experts. Thanks.