

Re: enlarging my display device memory

Source:

<http://www.tech-archive.net/Archive/WinXP/microsoft.public.windowsxp.newusers/2005-07/msg01840.html>

- From: "Kathea Banshou" <KatheaBanshou@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 28 Jul 2005 12:42:03 -0700
-

How much you can "tweak" your BIOS (increasing the amount of memory the system thinks the video driver has is an example of this) depends on your BIOS. As others have said, consider whether it would be desirable to make the change if you even can do so. Trident cards are not gaming cards and I assume that's why you're trying to increase your video RAM. Shared memory and games is, in my experience, not a good thing.

"D.Currie" wrote:

>
> "khalil" <khalil@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote in message
> news:0ADFBEAF-B79F-4F39-B46F-79F6989360AD@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx >> hi i have a notebook Toshiba A20-S103 >> and i have a graphic card trident cyberALADDIN-P4 32 M
>> they told me that there is a way to enlarge the memory of my graphic card >> by >> taking some memory from the RAMs.
>> if this is true , can anyone help me to do it ?
>> thanks
>
> If it's possible, it's a function of your bios. Somewhere in there may be a > setting to increase the video ram, and it's usually in increments of some > set number. So maybe you can choose 8, 16, 32, 64. Or maybe its 32, 64, > 128...
>
> To figure out how to get into the bios, and whether that change is possible > check the manual that came with the computer, or check the Toshiba website.
> It's going to be different on each brand/model of computer, so there's no > way to walk you through it step by step.
>
> Keep in mind that whatever you allocate to the video is not available to the > system, so this may not improve the performance and may in fact make it > worse, depending on how much ram you have and what application you're > running.
>
>
>
>

- References:

- ◆ enlarging my display device memory

- ◇ From: khalil

- ◆ Re: enlarging my display device memory

- ◇ From: D.Currie

- Prev by Date: Having problems with "run" \(disappeared\)

- Next by Date: Partitioning an External Drive

- Previous by thread: Re: enlarging my display device memory

- Next by thread: Windows XP Powerups

- Index(es):

- ◆ Date

- ◆ Thread