It has worked for me for four years now.

Hello Richard

WOOPS – services??–say no more ;-);-) – i just use to but 'objects & things'

I have seen Mailwasher mentioned a few times – so do you recon its a good thing to have as well as my ISP's own form of censorship for the spam?

I still get some spam, only because I have used my email address to "apply" for a few services over the web. But I also use Mailwasher, which catches 100% of it, before I ever download the valid emails to my computer.

Hello Richard
Yes I know I have let the horse out of the stable – who doesnt.
But as yet, dare I say it, for the last 3 years of access to the net etc
I have not been the subject of getting 'spam'.
I know I will regret saying that!!
I see you use a simple form of 'mungle'(is that the term).
Has it worked for you then.
Or should I get more complicated as per advice from Vanguard.
I did use a mungled email address when in the MS
Discussion groups,
before coming over to the newreader newsgroups system.

The thing is – you should do it to an email
address "before" you ever post to any forums. Your email address has already been harvested and you will be getting a lot more spam.

Hello Ted
You were onto this one quick.
I would have replied as quick but the phone rang.
Thanks for the info – I thought it would be stupidly
simple.
Funny you should ask though – yep I use O.E. ;-) Thank you again – it is done.

P.S. I do keep trying – honest.

Depends on how you
access newsgroups.
For
example, in Outlook
Express
go to Tools > Accounts > select your news
account and click Properties >
General
tab (the first
one) > E-mail
address >
type whatever you want.
